To-night will "snuff the candle" of the most successful bowling tournament ever held on the Palace alleys under the auspices of the Washington City Bowling Association.

Chairman Meyers and his two able assistants, Secretary C. Frank Myers and Master of Ceremonies George D. Cox, have been receiving the congratulations of all those who have participated, as well as from the large gallery of interested spectators. A most pleasing incident of this tournament has been the nightly attendance of the wives and sweethearts, as well as many friends, of those scheduled in the various events and classes.

While the Class A five-men teams and doubles have not equaled the scores recorded in last year's tournament, the squad of Class A singles has "snuffed" the pins for larger totals than have ever been mustered. William Miller, of the Saengerbunds, having set a mark of 652 that will stand for many moons.

The Class B events in doubles in last night's shoot featured with President Bishop, of the Colonial League, and Barclay, of the Puritans, they rolling a string for a total of 1,101, giving them third money.

In the Class C singles, "Cap" Ernest excelled, getting 577 for his set of three games, and going into second place, displacing Walsh by six points, and incidentally putting "Cap" out of the coveted special cash prize for high single game in any event, all three classes piling up the maps for an excellent total of 367, Walsh's score being 238.

Capt. Jacobson, of the Manhattans, rolled well in Class B singles, after getting off to a bad start, finishing with 341 and 206, and going into second place with 547.

get up early. We understand Thomas is a resident of "Bright-Wood."

Charlie Miller had hard luck in the singles, or that prefix to the Miller might have been changed—"Willie" (?) consent to let Charlie shoot over?

Chapin, of Chapin-Sacks, rolling in Class B, hung up totals for 557 and 555 in two of his sets. They are "the velvet kind."

The Colonials are composed of Lon Krauss, Edward McKnew, Charles A. Hartman, Frank Thomas, Chris Jacobsen, George T. Cox, and Capt. Arthur Allison.

Leitheiser and O. Oehler delighted their lady friends present by their consistent teamwork in the doubles.

THE DIAMOND.

156-National League formally organized at Grand Central Hotel, New York City, with Senator Bulkeley, of Connecticut, president, and William A. Hubbert, of Chicago, its guiding hand.

156-Peace made with the Pacific Coast League.

156-Manager Hugh Jennings, of Baltimore, admitted to the Maryland bar as attorney. Washington American League baseball club reorganized, with Thomas C. Hayes, president; W. H. Bayley, treasurer; B. S. Minor, secretary, and J. Garland Stahl, team manager. Fred Tenney, first baseman, made manager of Boston National League club.

156-Montreal club sold by Frank Farley, of New York, and Third Baseman Jimmy Casey bought from Jersey City club and made manager and third baseman.

156-Barney Dreyfuss, of Pittsburgh, sold his stock in the Philadelphia National League club to Manager William J. Murray.

Fred Tenney, the new manager of the Boston Nationals, is now in his fortieth year. When he graduated from Brown University in July, 1884, he joined the Boston club as a catcher and played in twenty-four games, batting .287. Next year he was sent to Springfield, Mass., but was recalled in 1886 and used as catcher and right fielder. In 1887, after a few games in the outfield, he took Tucker's place on first and stayed there until Dave traded him to New York in 1898. He played there in 1898 and 1899, but in 1900, on account of foot trouble, he asked for his release and played a little with the Lowell club. It was through Tenney that Russell and Paige got control of Boston this year, and Tenney again takes the place of manager instead of Fred Lake.

It is not generally known that Hugh Ambrose Jennings, with all his other accomplishments, is a full-fledged lawyer, licensed to practice in the courts of Maryland. That came about while he was the "busy bee" in the winters while managing the Baltimore club of the Eastern League before he went to the States, who drafted him in 1896. Cornell is his alma mater.

1887-Jack Dempsey beat Jack Langdon in four rounds at Philadelphia.

1888-Fred Welsh fought a ten-round draw with George Mennis at Los Angeles.

Fred Welsh's name in private life is Fred Hall Thomas. He is a native of Pontypridd, in Wales, and is twenty-five years old next month. He stands 5 feet 7 inches and weighs 132 pounds.

George Mennis is generally known in the ring as Jimmy Burns. He is a Bohemian by parentage, though he hails from Streer, Ill. He is twenty-nine years old, stands 5 feet 3 inches, and weighs 132 pounds.

1894-Joe Gans beat Mike Ward in ten rounds at Detroit.

1895-Fred Welsh fought a ten-round draw with George Mennis at Los Angeles.
